

Locomotive No. 1327, in 1953, after its wartime shield. I have not seen a photograph taken before 1945. Note the deeper cylindrical sandbox, the square patch on its tank, and the white shield.

J. Jones

Locomotive Pickford 100A, at an early date, probably in India, with the name painted on the tank.

The original photograph was taken by Mr. J. C. Pickford, son of the builder, and is now in the official photographic Pickford's collection, on page 104. Also Credit, Frédéric Ponting's studio.

Loco Peckett 1728. Note small condenser on the smokebox and the very tall chimney.

A. Goffe Collection

Locomotive in front of the camp by the stone walls, 1903.

F. Lewis

Japon, nose with nameplate, whistle mounted on the front of the cab, and a hinged lid for the tank filler, with a wooden wagon for supplying coal to the locomotive.

